AI in business

Week 1

- What did I contribute?

I discussed with my teammates how we should approach this project and how we could work together effectively.

I also made contact with our possible company, Waterkracht, which is the company we are basing our project on.

- What did my role as manager do first?

As the manager, I made sure that everyone understood the assignment and that we worked together to think about the project and our approach.

As mentioned before, I also took the initiative to contact the company we are basing our project on. This was important because it allowed us to start communicating with them and get a better understanding of the company and the project.

- What do I not understand yet?

I do not fully understand yet how the project will develop and how all the different parts will come together. I want to make sure that I understand what we are doing and what our final goal is.

I am curious to see how the project will take shape as we continue working on it.

Week 2

- What did my team publish

We made a part of our handbook code and discussed what our red line should be

- What did I contribute?

I coded a part of the handbook and filled a part of the variables.

- What did the gates ask, and what did we change?

i don't understand the question.

- What did I contribute?

I started with the handbook and tried to have our whole group thinking about what we wanted in the book and filled in the variables

Week 3

- What did your team publish? One or two sentences on the page and what it argues.

We published a test pilot of our AI agent. Also we published our interview guide to interview the manager of Waterkracht

- What did you contribute to it? Named and specific. A small contribution you can back up is worth more than a large one you cannot.

We divided the work and I made the interview guide and discussed with AI about some minor changes in my guide. I made interview guides before so I used that as input. I made it in Dutch because our whole group and the CEO of Waterkracht are Dutch.

- What did the gates ask, and what did you change? This week there are two sets of tutor questions to answer: the ones on your blueprint, and the ones on this architecture.
- What did your build role produce? The architecture, the first log entry, the part you built. Whatever your role put out this week.

In my role as leader I divided the tasks and also I made the interview guide because I will probably lead the interview
